Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 23 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy and damp, but brighter later.

Today:
A cloudy start to the morning, with outbreaks of rain in the west. Rain then moving eastwards and clearing by the early afternoon, Brighter skies following from the west, with most places enjoying clear spells by dusk. Mild. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
A dry night with clear spells and a risk of some mist and fog patches developing. Cloud will generally increase across Cornwall later as the next band of rain approaches. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Friday:
Mist lifting to give some brightness in the east, although a band of rain soon arrives in the west, reaching most of the area by midday. Brighter skies following later. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Likely turning wetter on Christmas Day. Staying cloudy on Boxing day with some rain possible at times. Monday also looks mixed. Perhaps some bright intervals, but also further rain likely.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.